This precious manuscript, for the use of the monastery of Monte Cassino, was executed in the kingdom of Naples in the year 1404. It is ornamented with fifteen large and sixty small miniatures, in the form of historiated letters, besides several thousand initials illuminated in gold and colours.

On the first page are found the ten following lines of verse, written alternately in red and black, which reveal the date of the execution of the Missal, its destination, the name of the donor, and that of the illuminator.

 D[ompnus]. F[ranciscus]. G[uantari].

Thus this manuscript was completed by Franciscus Guantari, a Neapolitan, in September, 1404, under the pontificate of Pope Boniface IX., by order of Henricus Tomacelli, Abbot of Monte Cassino, of the same family as the sovereign pontiff, whose name was Peter Tomacelli, and who died October 1st of the same year.

The six leaves which follow are devoted to the Calendar, written in red and black, and are divided from the Missal by two blank leaves. The first hundred and seventy-two leaves of the Missal are numbered in red.

The text of the Missal opens with the Psalms of David, and with a page of extraordinary richness of ornamentation. The half of the page is occupied by the first words of the Psalm: Beatus vir qui non abiit . . . The initial B, painted upon a ground of wavy gold, is not less than $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches in height by $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches in width. In the upper curve of the letter the Almighty is represented in His glory. The lower curve encloses the image of King David playing upon the guitar (or zither). Parting from his body, to the right and to the left, are green branches which carry in their coils the busts of twelve great prophets, and above the nimbus of the royal psalmist is the figure of the crucified Saviour. The fourteen other letters which compose the first and three following words of the psalm (Beatus vir qui non . . .) are disposed vertically, at the side, in two columns, and occupy fourteen compartments, with a ground of blue and red alternately; the letters are in gold, and each is supported by two angels.

The entire page is surrounded by a large border of blue and rose-coloured foliage, the interlacements of which form thirteen compartments with gold grounds and enclose scenes of war, etc., which probably relate to the history of Monte Cassino, the interstices being filled up with naked human figures and all kinds of animals. At the base is a coat-of-arms (party per bend dancettée azure and or) which also occurs in several other parts of the volume (ff. 89, 119, 138, 221).

Between the two columns of text is a representation of the Abbot of Monte Cassino in the attitude of prayer, emerging from the calix of a flower. Above him, in letters of gold, is the following inscription: "Henricus Tomacell' abbas Casin's."

The large miniatures enclosed within initial letters represent:—1. The Almighty; it is placed at the head of the "Breviarium secundum ordinem monachorum Casinensium" (f. 89 recto); 2. The Virgin Mary in the Stable, with the Abbot of Monte Cassino kneeling before her (f. 119 verso); 3. The Circumcision (f. 138 r°); 4. The Adoration of the Magi (f. 144 r°); 5. The Resurrection; this miniature occupies two-thirds of the page (f. 221 r°); 6. The Ascension; the same size as the one before (f. 243 v°); 7. The Descent of the Holy Ghost (f. 252 r°); 8. The Procession of the Host, by the Abbot and monks of Monte Cassino (f. 258 v°); 9. A Battle Scene (f. 265 r°); 10. The Martyrdom of S. Andrew (f. 299 r°); 11. S. Benedict

(f. 317 r°); 12. S. Scholastica, sister of S. Benedict (f. 339 v°); 13. S. Benedict in glory, being censured by two other saints, the Abbot Tomacelli praying before him; the painting forms the letter X (f. 351 v°); 14. The Apostles (f. 488 r°). All these miniatures, with a certain number of letters, embody the first words of the corresponding Office, the letters being illuminated and disposed in two rows, vertical, horizontal, or at right angles. Several of these pages are enclosed by rich borders formed of foliage and flowers; in one of these (f. 138), a lozenge contains the portrait of the Abbot of Monte Cassino; in another (f. 144), one sees the Abbot Tomacelli on horseback, a servant carrying his mitre, and above is painted a coat-of-arms (gules—a bend chequy azure and or), the same that figures at the side of the kneeling Abbot in the miniature on f. 351, and also in two initials on f. 7 r°. From each of the other historiated letters spread long appendages in the form of foliage, which cover one or more of the margins of the pages.

The other historiated letters, medium or small, of various sizes, enclose for the most part biblical figures, or the effigies of male and female saints. Two of them depict scenes from the New Testament: the initial on fol. 81 r°, representing the Virgin with the infant Jesus; the initial X., fol. 120 r°, representing the Nativity. Amongst the male and female saints one remarks: S. Athanasius (f. 56 r°); S. Ambrose (f. 307 r° and 446 v°); S. Lucy (f. 309 v°); S. Anellus, confessor (f. 311 r°); S. Vincent (f. 327 r°); S. Paul (f. 329 v°); S. Blaise (f. 336 r°); S. Barbatus (f. 343 r°); S. Augustin (f. 344 v°); S. Romanus (f. 347 r°); S. Barnabas (f. 378 r°); S. Paul (f. 394 r°); S. Mary Magdalen (f. 403 v°); SS. Nazarius and Celsus (f. 410 v°); S. Stephen (f. 415 r°); S. Dominic (f. 417 r°); All Saints (f. 470 r°); S. Cecilia (f. 479 r°); S. Mercury overthrowing Julian the Apostate (f. 483 v°); S. Catherine (f. 485 v°), etc. Many of these representations are accompanied by long hagiographs. The historiated initials are provided with illuminated appendages similar to the others.

MISSALE CISTERCIENSE. MANUSCRIPT UPON VELLUM, of the xiiith century, by an Italian scribe, written in long lines upon 160 leaves (11 × 7½ inches). Folio. black mor.

This manuscript is of the early part of the thirteenth century, as may be concluded from the fact that it does not contain the Service for Corpus Christi, which was instituted in 1264. At the end of the volume, on folios 155 and 156, is a note dated November, 1292, relative to relics in the Monastery of Morimundo.

The title-page is ornamented with a whole-length portrait of Gualbert, the founder of the Monastery of Vallumbrosa, and compiler of this Ritual. Dr. Dibdin thus describes the volume in his "Bibliographical Decameron," vol. i. p. 83 :—"It is printed quite at the commencement of the sixteenth century. The amplitude of the page, the size and variety of the types, the lustre of the inks, the tone and substance of the vellum, but above all, the pure arabesque taste of the decorations, to say nothing of the rarity and curiosity of the impression, all combine to render this volume an acquisition extremely precious to the Collector."

This copy agrees exactly with Dr. Dibdin's collation, except that there is no leaf of Table, i.e., only thirteen preliminary leaves.

OFFICIUM Beatæ Mariæ Virginis secundum Consuetudinem Romanæ Curia, aliaque officia, cum Calendario. MANUSCRIPT UPON VELLUM of the xvith century, of Italian execution, written upon 140 leaves ($6\frac{1}{2} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ inches). Sm. 4to. r. mor.

At the commencement of the first Office is a large miniature representing St. Jerome at prayer in a rich landscape, seen through an arched rock. The page opposite is surrounded by a beautiful border of Raffaellesque design, with pearls and medallions, enclosing a miniature of the Holy Family at Bethlehem, and a small painting of the Annunciation. The panel at the base of the page contains the arms of Antonio Landriani of Milan, for whom this volume was apparently executed, and of whom the medallion at the base of the border on folio 22 is probably a portrait. Besides the miniatures already mentioned, the volume contains eleven historiated initial letters enclosing effigies of saints, ten small compartments painted with highly-finished figures of birds and animals, and ten arabesque borders introducing Roman Imperial medallions.

PACE, RICHARD. Richardi Pacei, invictissimi Regis Angliæ primarii secretarii, eiusque apud Elvetios oratoris, De Fructu qui ex doctrina percipitur, liber. Basileæ apud Io. Frobenium, 1517. 4to.

a—n in fours; o, six leaves.

This rare and interesting treatise is said by Anthony à Wood (Ath. Oxon.) to have been written by the author at Constance while he remained Ambassador in Helvetia. It is of great value for the many anecdotes it contains of the learned Englishmen of the day, Sir Thomas More, Wolsey, Stokesley, &c., and for the author's enthusiastic praise of Erasmus. Among other curious things which occur in the tract is the original of the well-known story of the priest who preferred his mumpsimus to sumpsimus.

— Oratio Richardi Pacei in pace nuperrime cōposita & fœdere percusso: inter inuictissimum Angliæ regem & Francorum regem christianissimum in æde diui Pauli Londini habita. ¶ Venit in ædibus Ioannis Gormontij ad insigne Geminarum Cipparum [Parisiis.] 1518. 4to.

Eight leaves, with woodcuts of the arms of France and England. The treaty in question was on the occasion of the betrothal of the king's infant daughter Mary, afterwards Queen of England, to the Dauphin, son of Francis I. of France.

PARLIAMENT ROLL for 1515. MANUSCRIPT UPON VELLUM, written on a roll measuring 13 feet in length by 8 inches in width, in which are depicted and accurately emblazoned in their proper colours the arms of Henry VIII., with supporters drawn the full width of the roll, superscribed REX HENRICUS OCTAVUS, followed by the arms of the four prelates (the Archbishops of Canterbury and York and Bishops of Winchester and Durham), with their names and titles, under which (on the sinister side of the roll) are the arms of nineteen bishops and abbots, headed by Richard Fitz-James, who as Bishop of London "claymyth to have preemynence of all our bishoppys of the provynce of Canterbury as cancellarius episcopi." On the dexter side of the roll are the names, arms, and titles of twenty-five peers of the realm (the arms of Lord Darcy scratched across and the vellum punctured, with the addition, in another hand, of the word "Traytur").

In a jappaned case.

According to Willement, who in 1829 published a facsimile of this interesting document, only four rolls of this sort are known to exist (namely, those of the 5, 6, 8, and 31 of Henry VIII.).

PARTE, A, of a register, contayninge sundrie memorable matters, written by diuers godly and learned in our time, which stande for, and desire the reformation of our Church, in Discipline and Ceremonies, accordinge to the pure worde of God, and the Lawe of our Lande. [Without printer's name or date, but printed at Edinburgh by R. Waldegrave, 1593.] 4to. o. c.

Title and Table, 2 leaves; pp. 1-546; "A Prayer for the Faithfull," 1 leaf; "A briefe aunswere to the principall pointes in the Archbishops Articles," etc., 4 leaves, the last blank; "A demonstration of the trueth of that Discipline which Christ hath prescribed in his worde for the gouernment of his Church," pp. 1-86.

This secretly printed volume belongs to the Martin Mar-Prelate series, and contains no less than forty-four tracts against the bishops, and in the defence of the doctrines and practices of the Puritans. Most of the pieces are anonymous; but amongst the authors named are Robert Johnson, Anthony Gilby, E. Dereing, Nicolas Crane, etc.

The two latter pieces named above are not included in the table of contents, and would appear to be separate publications.

PSALMS. Psalterium Davidis, a Sancto Hieronymo ex translatione LXX. emendatum, literis aureis descriptum. MANUSCRIPT UPON VELLUM, of the ixth century, written upon 164 leaves. 4to.

This manuscript was formerly in the possession of M. Neumann of Luxembourg, and the following is a translation of an account of it written by Dr. A. Namur, and published in the "Bulletin du Bibliophile Belge" for September, 1860 :—

"THE PSALTER IN GOLD LETTERS GIVEN BY LOUIS LE DÉBONNAIRE TO THE ABBEY OF SAINT-HUBERT, IN 825.

"M. Neumann, state lawyer to the tribunal of the district of Luxembourg, possesses some manuscripts of great interest, from the library of the Abbey of Saint-Hubert.

"One of these MSS. is the celebrated Psalter written in letters of gold, given, as the 'Cantatorium' asserts, by Louis le Débonnaire to the said abbey, in the year 825, at the time of the translation of the bones of Saint-Hubert to their present resting-place.

"M. Neumann has most kindly confided this literary treasure to me, for the purpose of studying it carefully ; and the result of this study I here make known, rejoicing in the fact that this document, valuable for so many reasons, has been preserved from destruction, and that Luxembourg is so fortunate as to possess it.¹

"I shall endeavour to give an exact description of it, and to notice in succession :

"As this rather rare work is not within every one's reach, I do not think my work will be superfluous or useless, especially as I enter into details hitherto unknown, and do not agree with the Benedictine savants as to the origin of the MS."

"THE EMPEROR LOTHAIKE."

"The work itself, viz., the Psalter with the preface of Saint Jerome ;

"The three pieces of poetry, accompanied by three paintings, and two prayers that precede it ;

"The binding with its ornaments ; and

"Several pieces of more recent writing, inscribed upon leaves originally left blank, and a piece of music gummed inside the cover.

"A.—DESCRIPTIVE PART.

"It is a volume in 4to., upon vellum, richly bound, of 164 leaves, not numbered ; the height of the volume is om. 25 by om. 20 in breadth [$9\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{4}$ inches].

"I. THREE PIECES OF POETRY THAT PRECEDE THE TEXT.

"On the verso of the 3rd leaf, in ten lines, is a poem in honour of Lothaire, son of Louis le Débonnaire. Although these pieces are textually copied in the 'Second voyage littéraire' above-named, I think it better to reproduce them with a translation, since I shall found upon them a chief argument as to the origin of the Psalter.¹

*"Inclita cæsareum diffundit fama triumphum
Hlotharii, celebrat quem maximus ambitus orbis.
Hunc Oriens recolit mittens veneranter Achivos qui veniam curvi poscant et fœdera pacis.
syderis occidui populi sua jura tremiscunt, et tanto gaudent proni se subdere regi ;
quem non verba valent titulis exponere certis ingenii locuples neque sufficit illius unquam virtutis animi propriis percurrere verbis nec si centeno loqueretur lingua meatu."*

"TRANSLATION.

"A glorious reputation exalts throughout the world the imperial greatness of Lothaire. The East acknowledges it by sending a deputation from Greece to solicit a friendly alliance ; the peoples of the West revere his rule, and are proud to submit to his sheltering protection. No words can express all his claims to our homage ; the most ingenious mind cannot present a complete picture of his virtues, were a hundred voices to proclaim them."

"On the recto of the 4th leaf is a portrait of the Emperor Lothaire. The Emperor in full-length is seated on an antique chair, of which a lion and lioness form the two arms ; he is shod with crossed sandals. His Roman mantle is clasped on the left shoulder ; he has a crown on his head, and a sheathed sword ; he holds in his hand a long staff in the form of a sceptre. According to Capefigue, Lothaire is here represented in the dignity conferred by Pope Leo upon Charlemagne.²

"On the verso of the 4th leaf is a poem, of ten lines also, in honour of King David.

cœlitus hunc sacro spiramine namq. coegit psallere bis quinis cœlestia carmina chordis,

Quem canit et citharæ modulantis verbere plectri

cymbala psalterium prædocto pollice pulsat Mystica designent ut nobis carmina regem.”*

“TRANSLATION.

“ There was an illustrious King, whom God chose from among his brethren to govern his people. Heavenly inspiration led him to sing to the ten chords of his lute the prophetic announcement of the birth of Jesus Christ. In symbolic language he names him as the descendant of the royal race, and future ruler of the world. A melodious singer, he draws with a skilful hand silvery sounds from the sonorous lute, and accompanies them with sublime psalmody, that under the veil of allegory proclaims the mysterious conqueror.”

“ On the recto of the 5th leaf is a painting of a seated figure, representing David. A broad halo surrounds his head; he wears a blue tunic, with a mantle of purple colour clasped on the right shoulder.

“ On the verso of the same leaf is a poem of ten lines in honour of Saint Jerome.

*“ Hieronymus mundi celeberrimus extat in orbe
quem meritis vitæ fulgens veneratur Eous, syderis occidui reminiscitur ultima Thyle.
Testamenta D geminae qui consona legis tradidit ac vertit mutans sermone latino.
Hæc quoque psalmorum gratissima cantica nobis
transtulit ac demum rectum correxit ad unguem, Continet ut præsens descriptus namq. libellus
quem fieri regis veneratio magna coegit, cujus amor mundi quadrifida climata complet.”*

“TRANSLATION.

“ Jerome is a name famous throughout the universe. His merits, his holy life, are venerated in the East, and reverently held in remembrance in the most distant isle of the Ocean. He it was who studied the original, and translated into Latin the text of the Old and New Testament. He it was who made for us the correct translation of the lovely canticles contained in this Psalter, manuscript dedicated as homage to the king, who commands honour in the four parts of the world.”

“ On the recto of the 6th leaf is a painting representing Saint Jerome, bearing the inscription, ‘Hieronymus,’ on both sides of the head. He wears the priestly dress of the period.

" WRITING OF THE THREE POEMS.

" The three poems are written in gold, in rustic capital letters of the ixth century.

" This writing constantly occurs, with less variation than in other kinds of caligraphy, until the xth or xith century; for although Charlemagne, in his enlightened zeal, secured much improvement in writing, this character was still used in manuscripts, and in the ixth century whole pages were written in it.

" The commencements of the lines are not salient or retreating, but quite even.

" Punctuation is neglected; stops are only placed here and there in the middle or at the end of a line.

" Only the following abbreviations occur: D^s for Deus, namq. for namque, X.P.M. for Christum, Dⁱ for Del.

" THE PAINTINGS.

" The study of the miniatures and illuminations of ancient manuscripts is delightful and instructive. From it we learn the state of painting at periods when no pictures, properly so called, have come down to us; in more productive ages it helps to fix the characterization of the schools of art, it fills up the voids left in the series of painters and their works. Besides, what knowledge it affords us of the manners, customs, arts, costume, and taste at distant epochs, the history of which is still enveloped in darkness!

" The imperfection of the drawing in our three paintings is perhaps less a proof of want of talent in their author, than of the remoteness of the period to which they may be traced, when this art was in its infancy.

" This style of ornamenting manuscripts only arose in the viiith century, and the execution of paintings became gradually more perfect from the viiith to the xvith century.¹ Therefore even this imperfection may be considered as a proof of the antiquity of the work.

" II. TWO PRAYERS.

" On the verso of the 6th leaf and the recto of the 7th there are two prayers written in black ink, each consisting of 25 lines in small Caroline letters, one beginning with the words: 'Confiteor D^{no} et omnibus sanctis ejus et tibi pater, quia ego miser et peccator peccavi' (see 'Second voyage littéraire de deux religieux bénédictins,' p. 139); the other with the words: 'omnipotens qui p. os David electi tui carmina nos dulcissima docuisti' (see ditto).

" In these prayers abbreviations are more frequent than in the Psalter. It may be seen that they date from a later period than the work itself.

" III. THE PSALTER, PROPERLY SO CALLED.

" The præfatio Hieronymi occupies the verso of the 7th and recto of the 8th leaf. It is written in gold letters. The characters are, like those of the Psalter, Caroline small letters, with salient first letters, and headings in Caroline uncial letters.

" This preface, the title following it, and the Psalms themselves, show that it is the Latin vulgate of the Psalter of David, taken from the Septuagint, the most ancient translation, and corrected by Saint Jerome.

"This first version, rough as it was, but as accurate as possible, was at first the only one chanted by the faithful.¹

"The title of the Psalter, written within a border of gold, in seven lines, the first five in Roman capitals, the last two in Caroline uncial letters, occupies the verso of the 8th leaf. It is expressed in these words: 'Incipit liber Psalmorum emendatus a sancto Hieronimo presbitero.'

"The 150 Psalms, which begin on the recto of the 9th leaf, continue to fol. 164. The first commences with a large ornamental capital, representing the letters Be united. There are similar capitals after each ten Psalms. This custom was followed until the xth century. A fragment of a Latin Evangelium, MS. No. 693, in the Imperial Library of Paris, proves this.

"WRITING OF THE PSALMS.

"All the Psalms are written in small Caroline letters of great elegance. This writing, which under Charlemagne was of Merovingian coarseness, attained a considerable degree of perfection under the immediate successors of this prince. Some specimens that, in this respect, much resemble our Psalter, are the magnificent Bible presented to Charles the Bald by the abbot and monks of Saint Martin of Tours, written in the viiith or ixth century,² and the MS. of Terence of the ixth century, No. 7899 of the ancient Latin stock of the Imperial Library of Paris.³

"The headings of the Psalms are written in Caroline uncial letters of the time of Charlemagne and his successors, easily recognized by the beauty and elegance of their outlines.

"Each Psalm begins with a coloured and ornamented capital letter.

"The ornaments inside these capitals consist of the ribboned designs characteristic of the Carolingian period. They are numerous at that epoch, and especially rich in variety of composition. We see similar designs upon different church furniture, amongst other things upon reliquaries of the ixth century at the church of Coire, in Switzerland.⁴

"The first letters of each line are salient. Punctuation is pretty regularly attended to, by stops placed at the top, bottom, or middle of the line.

"In general it may be observed that throughout the whole Psalter may be remarked the perfection that writing attained under the first successors of Charlemagne. The fine Roman capitals were then restored to a place of honour and carefully used ; the small writing was perfected and improved so as to have an established form, destined to continue in general use until it was replaced by the Gothic character.

"PARCHMENT AND BINDING.

"The material upon which the Psalter is written is a parchment that appears to have been remarkably white, and to possess the characteristics of the parchment that during the viith and viiith centuries took the place of papyrus, in consequence of the changes caused in the East by the ravages of the Arabs, which obliged the northern nations to devise some means of replacing a material no longer to be easily procured.

"As to the binding of the volume, I do not think it is the original binding. It consists of two thick wooden tablets, cased with leather, with an outer covering of velvet of a rich red colour. The corners are adorned with silver bands, and the two clasps are on leather cased in velvet of the same colour as the cover, edged with tips and hinges of silver.

"The upper cover is ornamented with plates of silver-gilt forming a square border, enriched by regular incisions repeated the entire length of the bands. In the middle is a cross formed by bands of the same size and similarly ornamented. In the centre, in a plate of silver-gilt, om. 08 [$3\frac{1}{4}$ inches] in diameter, is a head with beard and long hair, covered with a crown resembling a helmet in shape, probably Louis le Débonnaire, donor of the book, or his son. A similar crown is seen upon the seal of a charter of Lothaire, reproduced in Mabillon's 'De Re Diplomatica,' p. 419, tab. 37.

"In the middle of the lower cover, within a square border formed by bands of silver-gilt, is a David carved in ivory in the Byzantine style, admirably executed. This David is om. 12 long by om. 05 wide [$4\frac{1}{2} \times 2$ inches]. The king is represented seated on a throne with his harp.

"Similar bindings of MSS. of the vith or viith century are known ; among others the copy of Justinian's 'Pandects,' preserved in the Laurentian Library at Florence.¹ These two folio volumes are bound with tablets of wood covered with red velvet, and adorned with silver ornaments on the surface and at the corners. But this binding may have been restored and modified later on.

"Petrarch in his time had the 'Epistles of Cicero,' transcribed by himself, bound with similar costliness. This volume is still in the same library at Florence. It is bound in wood with corners and clasps of copper.

"A large proportion of the manuscripts remarkable for the sumptuousness of their bindings belong to the period of Charlemagne or his successors. The 'Evangelium' of Saint Riquier, given to the abbey of that name by Charlemagne, in 793, was bound with plates of silver and adorned with gold and gems.

"There was, no doubt, a period of decadence in binding, as in all other arts and sciences ; but in the xvth century bindings again began to be enriched with plates of gold and silver, or with incrustations of ivory. In the xvith century, to render them more substantial, they were covered with boards of wood, often cased in leather or velvet, generally blue or scarlet.

"Taking into consideration the different periods to which more or less similar bindings may be attributed, it seems very doubtful whether the present binding of the Psalter is contemporary with the text itself. I do not believe it is. It is possible, even probable, that the metallic bands and ivory statuette belong to the original binding; but a fragment of music of the xith or xiith century gummed inside the lower cover proves that the binding was restored or modified later on.

" IV.

"Several prayers and other pieces of more recent writing are inscribed on the blank leaves at the beginning and end of the volume, and a piece of music is gummed inside the lower cover.

"The Rev. Fathers Martène and Durand, in their 'Second voyage littéraire,' have copied the prayers and other pieces inscribed on the blank leaves at the beginning and end of the volume. All these pieces, of less ancient writing, but of different dates, are in black ink, and have no direct relation to the Psalter itself. We read there :

"i. 'Orationes pro statu sanctæ Dei ecclesiæ.'

"ii. 'Quatuor orationes.'

"iii. 'Incipit oratio pro vivorum . . . qui psalterium in ordine vicis suæ cantare debent . . . Primum genibus flexis in terra orationem dominicalem et symbolum, tum denuo repetat eandem orationem dominicalem suppliciter obsecrans.'

"In this prayer the abbess of a convent prays for the brothers Lothaire, Charles, and Louis, all three sons of the Emperor Lothaire. She also prays for Charles, whom she calls her seigneur, apparently because her convent was under the dominion of this prince. This piece of ancient writing is attached to the cover of the MS.

"Lastly, after these different prayers, is a still more recent piece in these terms :

"'Apud Darisæl, in comitatu de Salmis, pro remedio animæ suæ et mariti sui Anselmi domina Gela femina nobilis tradidit ad altare S. Petri sanctique Huberti ad luminaria ecclesiæ xxx denaradas ceræ quæ solvuntur in festo S^{ci} Huberti.'

"The piece of music inserted inside one of the covers represents a series of neumas used in the xith and xiith centuries, and deserves serious attention, which might throw important light upon the history of harmony in the Middle Ages.

"All these pieces are written after the donation made to the monastery of Saint-Hubert, and seem to afford no proof for or against the gift as represented by the 'Cantatorium.'

" B.—HISTORICAL PART.

"Having described this precious literary relic in all its details, I think it important to study the history of its antecedents, as to which historians are not agreed, as also its vicissitudes up to this time.

"The most ancient source of information is the chronicle of the Abbey of Saint-Hubert, called the 'Cantatorium,' published and translated in 1847 by M. de Robaulx de Soumoy; also published by M. le Baron de Reiffenberg, in 'The inedited Belgian Chronicles.' The 'Cantatorium' is a source worthy of the greatest confidence. The volume is a small 8vo. of 176 pages, in small Roman letters of the xiith century.¹

"Several historians, ancient and modern, have studied and referred to it in their works. It is cited by Gilles d'Orval, 'La Gallia Christiana,'¹ by Roberti,² by Dom Calmet,³ le Père Bouille,⁴ the Bollandists,⁵ Dom Remi Cellier,⁶ Bertholet,⁷ Louvrex,⁸ Father Marne,⁹ Nicolas Lelong,¹⁰ and more recently by Messieurs Ozeray, de Gerlache, and the Baron de Reiffenberg.

"All these authors have drawn with confidence upon this interesting source. Fisen ('Hist. Ecclesiæ leod.') thus expresses himself: 'Eique illam fidem habemus quam tribui par est illi qui res usurpatis oculis scripsit'

"Durand and Martène ('Amplissima collectio,' preface, vol. iv.): 'Suos etiam scriptores monasterium andaginense habuit, in quibus non ultimo ponendus est loco Cantatorii seu historie ejusdem loci auctor hic editus, vir sane ingenii exquisiti, nec pro sua ætate mediocriter doctus, sed et valde pius, cujus opus eximium miramur hactenus (1729) delituisse in percelebri monasterio'

"This is what the Benedictines say upon the subject, says M. le Baron de Reiffenberg, in his introduction to the 'Cantatorium': 'Quocumque anno scripserit, is certe auctor est diligens et accuratus, publicaque luce dignissimus, utpote qui nihil prorsus asserat quod monasterii sui monumentis antiquis aut certe testibus oculatis non sit subnixum'

"I entirely share this confidence in the 'Cantatorium,' so far as it relates to the origin of the Psalter under notice, especially as the period to which the MS. belongs by its paleographic characters, leaves no room for doubt on this point.

"Upon the occasion of the translation of the body of Saint Hubert, says the 'Cantatorium,' which took place in 825, at which Louis le Débonnaire was present with several exalted personages, he made gifts of royal magnificence to the Abbey of Saint-Hubert. 'Some,' it says, 'have been destroyed by time, others are still left to us. We possess a very fine text of the Gospels ornamented with gold and pearls; a Psalter written in letters of gold, with a capital letter at the head of each ten psalms, &c.'

"These details correspond perfectly with what I have said in my description of the MS. I have had the opportunity of studying with admiration.

"Martène and Durand¹¹ advance, in one place, that the Psalter was given, not by Louis le Débonnaire, but by his son Lothaire. This opinion they found upon the verses and paintings inserted at the beginning of the MS.

when by a fortunate chance it was found again in 1824, at the moment it was doomed to destruction. (See 'Histoire de Bouillon,' par Ozeray.) It is now the property of M. Théodore Geoffroy, an officer of rank in the Belgian army, and a distinguished archæologist."

"On the other hand, in a notice inserted at the end of their 'Second voyage littéraire' they form quite another conjecture, and say: 'Having since observed the prayer written on the cover of the MS. in so ancient a handwriting, it seems to us more probable that this Psalter first belonged to a daughter of Lothaire, abbess or nun in a ladies' convent. For in it she prays for her brothers Lothaire, Charles, and Louis, all three sons of the Emperor Lothaire. She also there prays for Charles her Seigneur, viz., Charles the Bald, because her convent apparently was under the dominion of that prince. The three prayers found at the end of the volume for the Bishop Stephen, who, twenty-six years after the death of Charles, ruled the Church of Liège, appear to show that this Psalter afterwards passed from the hands of that princess to those of this prelate, and that he or some one of his successors gave it to Saint-Hubert's.'

"These proofs do not seem to me conclusive to contradict the fact of the donation as recorded in the 'Cantatorium.' In truth, it is very likely that the three poems which precede the Psalter were written in the Abbey of Saint-Hubert, a certain time after the gift was made, in no case before the year 840.

"The probabilities in favour of this opinion are:

"i. The pieces of poetry are written in another hand, in gold letters, rude capitals, while the Psalter itself is, from beginning to end, written in uncial and small letters of gold of the Carlovingian period. It seems to me that the same refinement in execution would evidently have been bestowed upon the dedication, had this been contemporary with the Psalter.

"ii. The paintings accompanying these poems are too coarsely done to have been inserted by the caligrapher of the Psalter in a chef-d'œuvre of this kind.

"iii. The poems themselves make no allusion either to the gift or the donor.

"iv. It is difficult to understand how the august donor could have had a panegyric added of himself.

"v. The only passages that can allude to the dedication of the work are the last verses to the 3rd poem: 'Quem (libellum) feri Regis veneratio magna coegit, cujus amor mundi quadrifida climata complet.' May we not consider this passage as purely historical—the expression regis applying to Louis le Débonnaire, who had had the MS. written, or to whom it had been dedicated?

"As to the second hypothesis of the Rev. Benedictine Fathers, proposed in the above-quoted 'Second voyage littéraire,' I consider it falls through if it be allowed, as I think likely, that the prayer upon which the hypothesis is founded was inserted long after the donation itself, upon a leaf left blank, and gummed inside the cover.

"The three poems and paintings accompanying them were most probably done by artists in the Abbey of Saint-Hubert, at a later period, perhaps at the accession of Lothaire to the throne, to honour in the son the memory of the father, the generous donor.

"Saint-Hubert possessed artists capable of such work. 'As for the liberal arts,' says M. de Reiffenberg, in his introduction to the 'Cantatorium,' 'they were cultivated successfully by the monks of Saint-Hubert. The transcription of books was obligatory upon the disciples of Saint Benedict, and we have elsewhere given a description of a "Scriptorium."

"But, besides skilful caligraphers and experienced illuminators, there were painters, sculptors, arithmeticians, musicians, and learned men.'

"On the other hand, the poems and paintings of similar books do not always allude to the donors of these books : a Psalter in 4to., executed in gold letters, formerly belonging to the Cathedral of Metz, bears the name of the Empress Hermintrude inserted in a formula of prayers. The three first pages contain three fine miniatures of great merit for the period.

"They represent : i. David ; ii. Charles le Chauve ; iii. Saint Jerome writing the translation of the Bible.¹

"The before-mentioned MS. of Trèves, given to the Abbey of Saint-Maximin by Ada, contains busts of Charlemagne and his sons.

"Besides, other analogous gifts made by Louis le Débonnaire are undeniably proved.

"The influence of the high patronage granted by Charlemagne to the art of calligraphy and illumination of manuscripts was felt under Louis le Débonnaire, his son and successor. Several instances of this occur.

"This prince gave to the Abbey of Saint-Médard at Soissons an Evangelium richly ornamented, that Martène and Durand found still in the treasury of that abbey.²

"Following his father's example, he willingly offered, as gifts to religious houses and great dignitaries of the Church, Evangelia richly bound. The one he sent to Pope Stephen, who had crowned him, was covered with bands of gold, according to Thégan : 'Textum sacrorum evangeliorum aureis characteribus exaratum, laminisque metalli ejusdem absque admixtione cujus materiei inclusum.'³

"The various opinions as to the origin of the Psalter of Saint-Hubert have been in turn adopted by modern historians,⁴ without, however, any one of them having attached much importance to the subject or examined the MS. personally, of which consequently they have been unable to form an independent judgment.

"M. Robaulx de Soumoy, in citing the two opinions without discussing them, states that the Psalter is said to be in existence now at the village of Boevange, Canton de Mersch, in the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, in the possession of M. Neumann, heir of the prior of Saint-Hubert.

"I am delighted to have been able to prove, with the work in my own hands, that this supposition is founded on positive fact, and that Luxembourg has the honour to possess a document so important in itself and in its historic memories.

"At Saint-Hubert the Psalter, like many other precious things of the same rarity, has been coveted. One day, in the year 1010, it disappeared,⁵ being carried away by sacrilegious hands. To avoid recognition in a foreign country, the robber offered it for sale at Toul ; but, says the author of the 'Cantatorium,' God permitted its restoration to our Church in the following manner :⁶ The mother of Pope Leo IX., Helwide, wife of the Comte de Geisheim et Dasbourg (Mouzon calls it, p. 21, Comté d'Egersheim in Alsace), having seen it for sale, bought and gave it to her son, then named Bruno, that he might learn the Psalms in it. Now this child could read any other Psalter, and easily remember what he learnt; but he made so many mistakes in reading in this, that soon he gave it up in disappointment. The mother was surprised at his dislike to this book until she heard the public rumour that it had belonged to the Abbey of Saint-Hubert, and that anathemas had been pronounced in several countries against those who should keep it in their unlawful possession.

"She at once came to the monastery accompanied by her son, and restored the Psalter, imploring forgiveness for her involuntary error. By way of reparation she also presented a Sacramentarium, which was afterwards given to the Church of Notre Dame at Givet, attached to the Abbey of Saint-Hubert.

"The manuscript thus restored remained in the library of this abbey until the time when, towards the end of the xviiith century, the French Revolution brought into Belgium also the fatal influence of its excesses.

"On the approach of danger the last abbé, Dom Nicolas Spirlet, accompanied by Dom Étienne¹ (M. Jacques Bernard Neumann), took possession of several sacred objects and of the most valuable books, to save them from pillage by removing them to a foreign country. Amongst them was the Psalter. Dom Spirlet died on the journey, in the Convent of the Franciscans at Eupen, in 1794. His companion in exile alone brought back to his native land the things saved, awaiting a favourable time for restoring them to their proper places.

"This moment soon came. After the crisis of Republican vandalism, the Church of Saint-Hubert was restored for worship, thanks to the generous patriotism of ten notables of the place,² who bought it in 1808 for the sum of 35,000 francs, a sum which, by an act of August 1st, 1809, was returned to the purchasers from the amounts collected in the diocese by Monseigneur Pisani de la Gaude, Bishop of Namur. Dom Étienne at once restored the sacred objects he had so fortunately preserved.

"The Psalter and some other manuscripts he kept in remembrance of the abbey, where he had passed a great part of his life. At his death he bequeathed them to his nephew, M. Neumann, of Boevange, Procureur d'État au Tribunal de Première Instance, at Luxembourg, their present owner, who fully appreciates their value, and, I venture to hope, will not easily allow them to leave Luxembourg.

"Professeur Bibliothécaire à l'Athénée de Luxembourg."

² "The act passed June 7th, 1808, before the notary Dehez, is signed by the ten notables, whose names live in history, and in the hearts of all lovers of art and religion. They are: MM. Leopold Zoude, afterwards member of the Representative Chamber of Belgium; Louis André Doutreloux, receiver of land taxes; Dom Isidor Bauwens, a former monk of the abbey; Joseph Lambert, justice of the peace; Jacques Pirotte, merchant; Jean-Baptiste Bouillon, sanitary officer; Auguste Lambin, père, innkeeper; Charlier, père, and Henri Charlier, fils, merchants. PSALMORUM DAVIDIS LIBER. MS. SÆC. XIII.

PSALMS. Psalterium Davidis. Accedunt Cantica Biblica, Symbolum S. Athanasii, Litania, Orationes variæ, Confessio et Forma Absolutionis : cum Calendario. MANUSCRIPT UPON VELLUM, of the xiith century, written on 204 leaves ($5\frac{1}{4} \times 3\frac{1}{4}$ inches) and ornamented with 13 full-page illuminations executed in gold upon a red ground in the Byzantine style, also numerous smaller capitals. Sm. 8vo. o. c.

This curious manuscript was probably executed at Venice.

— Psalorum Davidis liber, cum Commentario. MANUSCRIPT UPON VELLUM, of the xiiith century, of Spanish execution, written upon 600 leaves ($15\frac{1}{4} \times 10\frac{1}{4}$ inches), with eleven illuminated initials of great beauty. The letter B at the beginning of the first Psalm is an exquisite specimen of interlaced ornament, with seven figures introduced ; at the foot David is lying on a bed. The other initials illustrate the 26th Psalm, ' Dominus illuminatio mea ; ' 38th, ' Dixi, custodiam vias meas ; ' 52nd, ' Quid gloriaris ; ' 53rd, ' Dixit insipiens in corde suo ; ' 68th, ' Salvum me fac Deus ; ' 80th, ' Exultate Deo ; ' 98th, ' Cantate Deo canticum novum ; ' 101st, ' O Domine exaudi orationem meam ; ' 109th, ' Dixit Dominus domino meo,' and the ' Canticum Isaie.' This last is an exquisite piece of interlaced work, while the other ten letters contain small figures. The first illumination is 4 inches by 3 inches, and the others about 2 inches square. Folio. Bound in Spanish calf, with brass bosses on the sides.

— Psalterium Davidis, cum Canticis, Hymno (Te Deum), Symbolo S. Athanasii, Litania, etc. MANUSCRIPT UPON VELLUM, of the xiiith century, of English execution, written on 213 leaves ($6\frac{1}{4} \times 4$ inches), ornamented with a large illuminated initial letter B and 7 other historiated letters, also numerous small illuminated capitals. 8vo. bl. mor.

From the Bragge Collection.

— Psalterium Davidis, cum Calendario. Accedunt Cantica Biblica, Hymnus (Te Deum), Symbolum S. Athanasii, Litania, Orationes, etc. MANUSCRIPT UPON VELLUM, of the xiiith or xivth century, of English execution, written on 229 leaves ($6 \times 4\frac{1}{4}$ inches) and ornamented with 24 circular miniatures, painted on a gold ground, ten large initials and numerous minor decorations. 12mo. v.

— Psalterium Davidis et Cantica Biblica cum Calendario et Orationibus. MANUSCRIPT UPON VELLUM, of the xiiith century, written on 341 leaves ($4\frac{1}{4} \times 3\frac{1}{4}$ inches), the Calendar ornamented with 12 small circular miniatures, having also fifteen historiated initials and numerous illuminated capitals, in the Anglo-Norman style. Sm. 8vo. o. v.

PSALMS. Psalmorum Davidis liber, cum Commentario. MANUSCRIPT UPON VELLUM, of the early part of the xivth century, written upon 287 leaves ($14\frac{1}{2} \times 10\frac{1}{2}$ inches) in double columns with 14 illuminated initial letters of curious design. Folio. ol. mor.

This manuscript was probably written and illuminated by a German scribe.

— Psalterium Davidis cum Commentario. MANUSCRIPT UPON VELLUM, of the xvth century, of English execution, written in double columns upon 350 leaves ($10\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches) with illuminated capitals. Sm. folio.

— Psalterium Davidis cum hymnis Ecclesiae et Calendario. MANUSCRIPT UPON VELLUM, of the xvth century, of Italian execution, beautifully written in double columns upon 98 leaves ($7\frac{1}{4} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ inches), each page being very prettily decorated with pen work. The first 10 leaves are occupied by the calendar. Psalm 1 opens with a rich border in gold and colours; in the initial letter King David is represented playing upon a harp. Sm. 4to. o. r. mor.

This manuscript is in an Italian binding of the xvith century, with the sides richly tooled.

— [Polyglot.] Quincuplex Psalterium. Gallicum. Romanum. Hebraicum. Vetus. Conciliatū. [Cum commentariis a Jac. Fabio.] Parisiis typis H. Stephani, 1509. Folio. o. c.

[Colophon.] ¶ Imprinted by me Gwalter Lynne, dwellyng upon Somers kaye, by Byllynges gate. In the yeare of our Lorde God. 1548. Sm. 8vo. Black Letter. c.

A-D4 in eights. Upon the title-page is a small woodcut signed in full "Hans Holbein."

"But the Doctor [Rev. John Lee, D.D.] possesses a very curious treasure, in a small tract, 'wryten by the famous Clerk, Doctor Urbanus Regius, unto a special frynde of hys.'—'Imprinted by Gwalter Lynne, dwellyng upon Somers Kaye, by Byllynges Gate;' 1548, 12mo. The title-page presents us with a woodcut, (the Good Shepherd and the Hireling—the former in the figure of Christ) which is the only one I remember to have seen with the name of HANS HOLBEIN introduced. My friend, the late Mr. Douce, would have considered this volume to be above all price."—Dibdin's Northern Tour, vol. ii. p. 641.

At the head of the volume is a very fine full-page painting ($10\frac{1}{4} \times 6\frac{1}{4}$ inches), representing the Madonna seated on a raised throne, on the right of which stand S. Constantius and S. Lawrence, and on the left S. Ercolanus and another bishop, the three first being the patrons of the city. Above them is a triple canopy, from the arches of which is suspended a scarlet cloth of honour. In the foreground kneel seven members of the corporation. This painting may very probably be the work of Matteo.

Sm. folio. In the original binding of oak boards covered with stamped leather, with clasps.

The first part of this interesting manuscript consists of a Latin translation of two contemporaneous treatises by Savonarola; the second part is a discourse on patient endurance by S. John Chrysostom, translated by William Sellyng out of Greek into Latin. Sellyng was a Fellow of All Souls, Oxford, who, dissatisfied with the studies pursued there, went to Italy and made the acquaintance of Politian at Bologna. About 1485 he returned to England with a valuable collection of MSS., and became prior of Christ Church, Canterbury. He was one of the few English scholars of that age who had a knowledge of Greek.

Folio 162. 4 grants, &c., in Karleton, as indexed.

Kelington.

Folios 162^b-163. 4 grants, &c., in Kelington, as indexed, except that in the MS. they are numbered 5, 6, 7, 8, instead of 1, 2, 3, 4.

Cuwick [Cowick].

Folio 164. 3 grants, &c., in Cuwick, as indexed.

Hexensale.

Folio 164^b. 5 grants, &c., in Hexensale, as indexed under Hethensale. The x appears to have been written by mistake for h, the Saxon and mediæval thorn (th), which might if carelessly written or read be mistaken for x.

Poullington.

Folio 165^b. 8 grants, &c., in Poullington, as indexed.

Added later are :

Folio 166. 1. Suit between Selby Abbey and William, son of William de Wenteworth.

VENETIAN LIBRARY. A Library of 170 volumes, mostly in folio, in their original bindings, collected at the close of the sixteenth century by Dr. Odorico Pillone of Casteldardo, and ornamented on the sides and edges with paintings by Cesare Vecellio [1530-1606]. The entire collection is now preserved in an ebony bookcase, bearing the following inscription :—"Libros hic repositos summa diligentia collegit Odoricus Pillonius Venetus, ornavit eximiâ arte Cæsar Vecellius."

The following description of this unique collection is from the pen of the late Sir Wm. Stirling-Maxwell, Bart. :—

"All lovers of the illustrated books of the sixteenth century are probably acquainted with the 'Costumes, Ancient and Modern, of different parts of the World, with Discourses on the same,' by Cesare Vecellio, published at Venice in 1590, and again in 1598. The author was a nephew of Titian, and the excellence and spirit of his designs are so great that it was long the fashion of catalogue-makers to attribute them to the pencil of the great painter of Venice. The book is no less rare and costly than beautiful, and though only a small 8vo—in fact, a modern 12mo—it sells (the first edition, at least) for £18 to £20, and even the second edition is seldom to be had for half that price. In the Discourse which treats of the dress of a gentildonna of Civital di Belluno, Vecellio dilates with great rapture on the casa di Pillone, one of the chief families of the little town, and of their charming villa of Casteldardo, one of its chief ornaments. The house was of correct and graceful architecture, such as became the country retreat of a refined Venetian noble ; and it had a pleasant seat, amenissimo di sito, so sheltered from the extremes of heat and cold as to enjoy a perpetual spring. It was filled with all things rich and rare—books in abundance, pictures and medals, portraits of great men on canvas, or in marble or bronze. So rich was it in rarities that a facetious Cardinal della Torre was wont to call it the Ark of Noah. The gardens were large and well ordered, and the place was the pride and show of the neighbourhood. The owner, in the years just before and after 1590, was Odorico Pillone, one of the ablest and most admirable doctors of law ; and his three sons—Giorgio, Bartolo, and Baldo—were worthy of their sire and their home, and were mated with three wives worthy of themselves. In short, Cesare Vecellio writes of Casteldardo and its inmates as one who knew and loved them, and desired to give them such immortality as was in the gift of handsome mention in a book treating of costume. The gentildonna of Civital di Belluno, a matron of the rounded form and comely dignity which Venetian art loves, selected, no doubt, as the best-dressed woman in the district, may well be supposed to have been one of the ladies of Casteldardo.

"The reader of the 'Discorso' in question might easily have guessed that Cesare Vecellio was a friend and favourite of the Casa Pillone, and was welcomed at the Pillone Villa as Turner was welcomed at Farnley, or Leslie or Stanfield at Bowood. Such turns out to have been the fact, as is proved by other evidence than is to be found in the 'Habiti Antichi e Moderni.' After weathering the storms of war and political change, and escaping plunder by 'fiery Frank or furious Hun' : after passing from the mild sway of the Doges, through the iron tyranny of French and German Cæsars, to the rule of the Ré galantuomo, Casteldardo has had to give up, probably at the bidding of the law which compels equal division of property, its sixteenth-century treasures ; and its curious library was lately sold to a book-seller at Venice.

"Amongst the books were one hundred and seventy volumes, adorned, as documents which accompany them incontestably prove, by the friendly and facile pencil of Cesare Vecellio.

"About twenty of them, clad in the ordinary serviceable vellum wrappers of the period, in which they came from the shops of Sansovino or the brothers Giolito, have these wrappers enriched by designs in pen and ink, or washed in with Indian ink, by Vecellio. It has never been our lot to see so many of his drawings together, and they certainly give a high idea of his cunning and ease of execution. The 'Venetia,' of Francesco Sansovino, Venice, 1581, a stout 4to, has on the front of the wrapper a very spirited sketch of the Piazzetta of St. Mark, and on the other side a view of some islets of the Sea Cybele. The Piazzetta is treated very much as it is in the woodcut in the 'Habiti Antichi e Moderni.' An Italian translation of the Freiherr von Herberstein's 'Commentaries on Muscovy,' 1550, has a fur-clad Russ on one side and a landscape with snow and sledges on the other. Ciacono's curious folio, 'History Vindicated from Calumnies relating to the Release of the Soul of Trajan from Purgatory through the Prayers of St. Gregory,' Rome, 1576, is adorned with two very capital drawings. In the first, recto, the mediating Pontiff is seen saying mass in his chapel; in the second, verso, we have an interesting view of the column of the good Emperor, and its surroundings as they existed in the time of Sixtus V. The 'Epigrammata' of Guillelmo Bianco, and other tracts on the erection by Sixtus V. of the obelisk of the Vatican circus in the piazza of St. Peter's, in 1586, has a view of the monolith and the portico of the church, and (verso) of the strong timber scaffolding by means of which the obelisk was placed upon its pedestal. Perhaps the gems of these curious adornments are a couple of drawings of Red Indians, on either side of the Latin version of Hariot's 'Virginia,' published at Frankfort in 1590 by Theodore de Bry; one a warrior, with bow and arrow; the other a boatman, with a paddle over his shoulder.

"Passing to the older folios, dating from the early part of the sixteenth century, or from the second half of the fifteenth, we find bindings of a character not inviting to pen or brush; dark leather or creamy pigskin, rough with deeply-stamped devices, or rendered quite impracticable by bosses of brass. Here Vecellio has exercised his skill on the edges, which, as the tomes are generally of a comfortable corpulence, presented a considerable and conspicuous field for his fancy. Folios of those days being generally secured with clasps or strings, these appendages afforded convenient and handy means of drawing them from the shelf when wanted. Such books were therefore commonly placed with their backs to the wall and their fore-edges exposed, as may be seen in old prints of saints and scholars, and at this day, in the library of the Escorial, where the long lines of edges, all bright with the thick fine gold of the days of Philip II., used to make a goodly show. The fore-edges were also frequently lettered in bold capitals with the titles of the volumes; and not a few of these Pillone folios have been so treated, which must have added, in no small degree, to the difficulties of Vecellio by compelling him to shape his compositions to the cramped spaces at his disposal, and to mind the P's and Q's of the scribe as well as his own effects. He has generally contented himself with a single figure, grandly designed and boldly coloured. St. Jerome, sometimes in the red robes of the cardinal, sometimes in the semi-nudity of the hermit, appears in various attitudes on the fore-edges of the portly edition of his works, printed by Froben at Basel in 1537. Augustine's 'De Civitate Dei,' Venice, 1494, has that good bishop in his study, with a view of Hippo, we presume, by the sea-shore in the background, looking very like Venice. Galen's 'Opera,' Basel, 1529, is decorated with a doctor in his scarlet robes and hat trimmed with ermine, as an M.D. of Padua, no doubt, figured in high days in the halls of that famous University. Seneca's 'Epistolæ,' by 'Arnold Pannartz, a German,' produced, as the colophon informs us, 'not with common ink or pen of feather, or reed, or iron stile, but by a certain skilful invention of printing or characterizing (characterisando),' Rome, 1475, displays a stately senator in red cap and red robe and cape of ermine, who, enlarged and placed on canvas, might have done honour to the galleries of the Grimani or Manfrini. Dante, Venice, 1491, of course has the well-known figure in red, with the capucho of old Florence. Though portrait-like figures greatly predominate, other ornamentation is not wanting. The 'Dictionarium of Calepin,' Lugduni, 1578, has a vase with a tall flower of many blossoms; Eutropius, Basel, 1532, shows the heads of three Emperors; and Suetonius, Basel, 1533, the same number of gold medallions on a light-blue ground.

"The preservation of these fine books is very remarkable. Many have the clasps, not only in front, but also at top and bottom, where they are very rarely found entire. The bindings are, on the whole, in excellent preservation; and Dr. Odorico and his forefathers were evidently lovers of tall copies and ample margins, which they wisely left uncontaminated with midnight oil. The freshness of Vecellio's colouring also says much for the good housewifery of generations of Pillone ladies, and for the conservative climate of ever-vernal Casteldardo. A sight more pleasant to the eye of a lover of books than the rows of Vecellio's illuminated fore-edges is not easily to be found in these islands. Single specimens of this style of book decoration may be found in choice libraries, but so many have probably never been assembled in a single bookcase; and as the work of one hand, these Pillone books may be confidently described as an unrivalled collection."

Title and preliminaries, 12 ll.; A—Q 4 in eights.

This account of the military exploits of the Marquis of Montrose was written by Dr. George Wishart, a Scotch prelate who had been deposed from the ministry and imprisoned for refusing to take the Covenant. On his release he attached himself to Montrose, and Hume relates how at the execution of the unfortunate nobleman a copy of this book was brought and tied by a cord about his neck.

Beware the third, if this, in vain be gone.

London, Printed by I. L. for Andrew Hebb, at the Bell in Pauls Church-yard. 1641. Sm. 8vo. ol. mor. g. e. (Riviere.)

This is the rarest of all Wither's publications, only four perfect copies being known, viz., that in the British Museum (formerly Herbert's), Mr. Huth's (from the Bridgwater Collection, and formerly T. Park's), Mr. Crossley's (formerly Mr. Corser's), and the present copy (from Mr. Gaisford's library), which was formerly R. Heber's, and it is believed, on the authority of T. Park, that Heber bought it at John Brand's sale. It contains on the flyleaf the following MS. note, "The guift of my worthy freind M^r Georg Wither, receaved from his own hand the 12th of August Anno Dni 1641."

These four little tracts are attributed to John Wycliffe, and were printed by Robert Redman some time between the years 1527 and 1532. The first piece, entitled "The Testament of Moyses," is the only portion of Holy Scripture purely of Wycliffe's version, printed for the use of the people. These tracts were printed and sold separately for the use of the poorer classes, which no doubt accounts for their extraordinary rarity, no other copies being known to exist, with the exception of those preserved in the library at Lambeth Palace.

The present copies were discovered by Mr. J. Dix, and were afterwards in the collection of the late Mr. S. Addington.

— Yorkshire Tenures. MANUSCRIPT UPON PAPER of Christopher Towneley, written upon 181 leaves, with two Indexes occupying 48 additional leaves, entitled "Tenures in Chief in the County of York," dated 25 November, 1667. The tenures are chronologically arranged, and extend from temp. Henry III. to temp. Philip and Mary. The MS. is unpagged, but is divided into 555 articles, probably corresponding to the pages or leaves of the document or record from which this MS. was copied. Folio. In the original green leather binding.

Articles 423-430 contain a list of fines for the years 3-4 Elizabeth [1560-1562].

Articles 520-525 contain a list of fees belonging to the Honour and Castle of Pontefract, being parcel of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Article 517 contains Knights' fees belonging to the Castle and Manor of Tickhill, certified under the seal of the Duchy of Lancaster on 25 January, 16 Elizabeth [1574], and extracted from the records of the Duchy Court.

Article 526 contains a list of manors, lands, and tenements, held either from the King in chief by knight's service or otherwise.

The last 31 leaves consist of a description of lands and their occupiers, in alphabetical order, apparently extracted from a book of escheats of the time of Elizabeth.

At the beginning of the volume is an elaborate index of places and names.

[BULWER, JOHN.] Chirologia: or the Naturall Language of the Hand. Composed of the Speaking Motions, and Discoursing Gestures thereof. Whereunto is added Chironomia: or, the Art of Manuall Rhetoricke. Consisting of the Naturall Expressions, digested by Art in the Hand, as the chieftest Instrument of Eloquence, by Historicall Manifesto's, exemplified out of the authentique Registers of Common Life, and Civill Conversation. With Types, or Chyrograms: A long-wish'd for illustration of this Argument. By J. B. Gent. Philochirosophus. London, 1644. 8vo. Frontispieces and Plates. bl. mor. g. e. (Bedford.)

The present copy has, in addition to four original blank leaves at the beginning and end of the volume, another leaf with only a small engraving on it, containing the word "Chirotheca." This was evidently intended as a collective title to the two books "Chirologia" and "Chironomia" that follow, and is, as far as can be ascertained, unique.

This rare volume is a Latin translation of the equally rare book published in Italian by Montalboddo Francano at Vicentia in 1507, entitled "Paesi novamente ritrovati et Novo Mondo da Alberico Vesputio Florentino intitulado." It contains the navigations of Cadamosto (cap. 1-83), three of Columbus (cap. 84-108), Alonzo the Black (cap. 109-111), Pinzon (cap. 112-113), Vesputius' Third Voyage (cap. 114-124), Josephus the Indian (cap. 129-142), and several letters relating to Portuguese voyages. Upon the title-page is a large woodcut map of Africa.

This copy, from the Seillière Library, has the fore-edges entirely uncut.

This manuscript is a contemporary transcript of the first edition of King James' Basilicon Doron, Edinburgh, 1599, of which it is said only seven copies were printed. It contains at the commencement the two Sonnets which are only to be found in that edition, one of them forming the Dedication to his son Prince Henry, and the other "the Argumente of the Booke." These were omitted in the editions printed in 1603 and subsequently.

NORTHUMBERLAND, JOHN DUDLEY, DUKE OF. Historia delle cose occorse nel regno d'Inghilterra, in materia del Duca di Notomberlan dopo la morte di Odoardo VI. Nell' Accademia Venetiana, 1558. Sm. 8vo. ol. mor. g. e.

A, 3 ll. ; B—I 4 in eights.

This volume is a contemporary narrative of the events that occurred in England after the death of Edward VI., and includes a curious account of the landing of Philip of Spain at Southampton, his journey to Winchester, and his marriage to Queen Mary. It also relates the execution of Lady Jane Grey and Lord Guildford Dudley, her husband, the fourth son of the Duke of Northumberland. The preface is written by Luca Cantile, to whom the volume is sometimes erroneously ascribed. It is in reality a surreptitious edition of a work printed in 1560 by Raviglio Rosso.

[STERNE, REV. LAURENCE.] A Political Romance, addressed to ———, Esq. of York. London Printed, 1769. Sm. 8vo.

A—E in sixes.

This little piece (the title of which was to have been "The history of a good warm watch-coat, with which the present possessor is not content to cover his own shoulders, unless he can cut out of it a petticoat for his wife, and a pair of breeches for his son") was written by Sterne in the year 1759, but for private reasons was then suppressed. It was occasioned by a controversy between Dr. Fountayne, Dean of York, and Dr. Topham, concerning some preferment expected by the latter.

[STIRLING, EARL OF], SIR WM. ALEXANDER. Avrora. Containing the first fancies of the Authors youth, William Alexander of Menstrie. London, Printed by Richard Field for Edward Blount. 1604. Sm. 4to. r. mor. g. e. (Ramage.)

First and only edition of this series of poems, all of which were omitted in the collected works of the author, published in 1637 under the title of "Recreations with the Muses." According to Horace Walpole ("Royal and Noble Authors," vol. v., p. 73), they were written under the disappointment of an ill-requested attachment.
